Abstract: The division provides comprehensive educational technical information and documentation resources and services to the Department of Education and its constituencies. Data/information are from regular commercial/public vendors. The source includes print, nonprint, and computerized access to education and related social science information. The National Institute of Education Library provides access to over 182-on line computer data bases and comprehensive library service based on a 172,000 volume collection. Materials cover 1489 to present. This system is updated on a continuing basis. Computer printouts, microforms, reports, catalogs, and directories are generated. Books, periodicals, microforms, and other standard library materials are among output.

Abstract: These tabulations display the personal and program-related characteristics of persons whose cases are closed out each year in the state-federal program of vocational rehabilitation. Included are age, sex, race, type of disability, earnings, work status, occupation, cost of purchased services, time spent in rehabilitation, and similar personal data on former participants. The data are arranged by levels of administration (national, regional, and state rehabilitation agency) and by such special target groups as the severely disabled, the Social Security disability income beneficiary, blind persons, deaf persons, and sheltered workshop worker. The data are used for program analysis, monitoring, and evaluation purposes and to determine instances where state agency policy may be questioned or where technical assistance may be in order.

Abstract: This report is the most important source of information about caseloads in state vocational rehabilitation agencies. Available information includes key program measurements such as the number of persons served and rehabilitated, and whether they are severely disabled. Trends in the intake and outflow of cases are displayed, as are numbers of persons in various stages of rehabilitation. The data in this report provide an important basis for program planning and evaluation and for budget preparation. These data are forwarded in various formats to the Department of Education, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Congress.

Geographic Relevance: National; State; City; Local Education Agency

Abstract: The Directory of Grant Awards will provide a set of tables organized by program category, i.e., basic grants, demonstration grants, desegregation grants, training grants, fellowship programs, schools of education grants, bilingual vocational instructor training and bilingual vocational training grants, and grants to bilingual education support centers, to materials development projects, to evaluation, dissemination, and assessment centers, and to state education agencies; by state and alphabetically by grantee. Each listing will contain the name, address, and contact person for the grantee, the grant number, the period of the grant, and the amount of the grant award. Depending upon the program category, listings will also include the language(s) served, the estimated pupil participation, number of trainees or fellows by language, and the grade level(s), types of training, or degrees offered by language. The purpose of the Directory is to provide a complete reference to the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Language Affairs' (OBEMLA's) grant awards by fiscal year for the use of staff, others in the Department, the Congress, grantees and potential grantees, and the general public. The Directory fulfills part of the mandate to report to the Congress and the President on activities carried out under the Bilingual Education Act. The Directory will be the principal product of the Bilingual Education Management Information System (BEMIS) being developed in the Department's Office of Information Resources Management for OBEMLA.

Abstract: The National Clearinghouse for Bilingual Education (NCBE) was established pursuant to Sec. 742(h)(5) of the Bilingual Education Act to collect, analyze, and disseminate information about bilingual education and related programs. It is the principal information nucleus for bilingual education and, as such, it provides information about bilingual education and related areas to federal agencies, Congress, the states, the bilingual education community, and the general public. It maintains and provides access to a computerized database. It provides up-to-date information on legislation, policies, and other developments regarding bilingual education. It publishes a monthly newsletter, FORUM, available free upon request, and numerous other information products written by distinguished experts in the field. It coordinates information gathering, processing, and sharing by the network of centers funded by the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Language Affairs, by the states, and by other agencies and individuals working with minority language students. In this connection, it supports field staff in San Diego and Berkeley, California, in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to bring its services closer to specific user populations. The Clearinghouse also operates a toll-free WATS line, the better to serve distant users.

Geographic Relevance: National; State

Abstract: The library was created to support the mission of the Commission on Civil Rights and to assist the Commission in carrying out its research, fact finding, and reporting on the status of regional issues as a repository for basic current data on civil rights issues and other closely related topics. It provides bibliographic and information services for Commission Staff in Washington and 10 regional offices, federal officials, Congress, other government agencies, private groups, and individuals based on its own collection and its knowledge of sources of additional information and data. Information collected and published by the Commission and 10 regional offices, is disseminated to Commission researchers, locally, and nationwide. The minority and women's civil rights collection was consolidated with the legal collection from the Office of General Counsel and the entire collection was reclassified by the Library of Congress classification scheme in 1973-74. The collection now consists of approximately 57,000 volumes on minority and women's civil rights, aging, handicapped and legal reference materials. The holdings include selected sections of the Censuses of Population and Housing; legal periodicals from 1950, state codes of 50 states; complete sets of U.S. Reports and Statutes at Large; The Federal Reporter and Federal Digest Systems and Corpus Juris Secundum. The library subscribes to approximately 150 legal and law related journals and 400 minority and women's rights and general periodicals. The notable holdings include a complete collection of Commission publications, reports, unpublished transcripts of proceedings, hearings, conference reports, "Perspectives," and the reports of the state advisory committees. The microform collection includes The Washington Post, New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Federal Register, Congressional Record and many periodicals on minority groups, women, aging and the handicapped. The Dialog on-line system is available for use. The major output types are an acquisition list, issued quarterly; bibliographies issued every 2 months, and a selected Journal Articles List which is issued every 2 months.

Abstract: The Pesticides and Toxic Substances Technical Information Center (TIC) is a centralized resource within the Environmental Protection Agency for chemical, health and ecological information on industrial and commercial chemical substances. Emphasis is given to published materials on those chemicals which are reviewed, assessed, controlled and regulated under the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) and the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. The scope of the collection includes health and ecological effects, toxicology, cancer, epidemiology, teratology and industrial processing, production and uses.

The primary purpose of the TIC is to provide scientific and technical information support to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) employees and to share the specialized resources with other government agencies. The collection is also made accessible to the private and academic sectors as well as to individuals concerned with environmental issues. The TIC provides the following support services: 1) Reference services in response to inquiries on chemical or related environmental aspects; 2) TSCA inventory searches of the public file; 3) Selection of books, reports and journals; 4) Acquisition and circulation of materials for EPA staff; 5) Interlibrary loans to other libraries; and 6) Organization of the materials into catalogs and lists.

Geographic Relevance: International/Federal Point for the United Nations Environmental Program; International Referral System (INFOTERRA) are to maintain an inventory of the U.S. organizations which will participate in INFOTERRA; to prepare a national directory of these information sources to be included in the INFOTERRA international directory; and to conduct a referral service to respond to requests from INFOTERRA users both within the United States and from other countries. There are two levels of organizations in the referral system: subfocal points, which consist of selected government agencies and private organizations which serve as parent organizations of several information sources, and sources, which consist of a single coherent body of information concerning a single aspect of the environment. A source may be an independent unit or part of an organization or institution. The source registration file contains the following: addresses and contact points; summaries of the source's functions and activities, the language in which services are provided; what products are available from the sources, restrictions, if any; and subject index terms. The National Focal Point serves as the INFOTERRA contact point for national and local government agencies, business and industry users, university and research institutions, special and professional organizations, and other groups or individuals concerned with environmental issues. The Focal Point provides users with listings of sources which are likely to provide the information requested.

Abstract: This directory provides information on the design, automated systems supporting the administrative and program operations of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). It assists in the planning and coordination of systems, reduction in system costs, and elimination of duplicative systems. The directory includes both existing systems and systems under development for which computer costs were generally greater than $20,000 in FY 1979. The information was compiled by the Management Information and Data Systems Division of the Office of the Assistant Administrator for Administration. The directory provides information on 400 major automated systems in all offices of the Agency, including regional offices and laboratories which have a major automated system. The following information is included for each system: system name; acronym; organizational name and code (physical location); system description, whether it is response to Congressional Act or Law, number of users, system location (type of computer system), life expectancy, fiscal 1979 costs for timesharing, contract support, and personnel; and responsible personnel. The systems are arranged by EPA organizational element within each of the offices. Alphabetical listing of system titles and of system acronyms are included.

Abstract: The library selects and acquires written materials extensively covering the subject matter of EEO, and processes and organizes the materials in order to provide reference and interlibrary loan services for supporting the mission of the Commission. The Commission Library contains a general collection of 5,000 volumes in the social sciences mainly related to the subject matter of EEO, and a legal collection of 10,000 volumes covering sources primary to the Commission attorneys task. The Commission library has been designated as the site to keep and preserve the Commission publications and reports available for inspection of the general public, to whom assistance is also provided. This information source is a composite of Commission publications and reports; social sciences titles related to the subject matter of EEO and general reference collection; periodicals including professional journals and law reviews; CCH, BNA, and other loose leaf service subscriptions in the labor field; and legal and legislative materials. The library provides reference and research services.

Congressional Relevance: House Committee on Education and Labor; Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources; House Appropriations Committee: Commerce, Justice, State, The Judiciary and Related Agencies Subcommittee; Senate Appropriations Committee: Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Subcommittee

Authority: Civil Rights Act of 1964 (P.L. 88-352)

Availability: Internal Use Only

Abstract: The media morgue is to assure that top agency officials are kept informed on issues pertinent to equal employment opportunity and other general civil rights matters. The sources for the OPA Information Clearinghouse are external. These include the Daily Labor Report, some 25 daily and weekly newspapers, magazines, newsletters, and private house organs. The media morgue collects articles appearing in the press which relate to the EEOC, Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, and employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Under a 1978 first-phase reorganization of the federal civil rights effort, the enacting of equal pay and age basis laws was shifted from the Labor Dept. to the EEOC. News pieces pertaining in these areas are also collected. Also, the Title VII, Executive Order 11478, Equal Rights Act, Age Discrimination Act, and Rehabilitation Act for federal government employees was shifted from OPM to EEOC. Moreover, the coordination of all federal EEO programs was transferred from the Equal Employment Opportunity Coordinating Council to EEOC. Articles for all these responsibilities are also included. The Office of Public Affairs reviews those publications mentioned above, which cover a nationwide area. Pertinent articles are circulated in top agency officials. This activity occurs on a daily basis, and a file on these items is also maintained. Output is copies of newspaper and magazine articles.

Abstract: Data are necessary for Research Division analysts to use in conjunction with Commission's data. Input is derived from Fourth Count 1970 Census merged with EEO survey data. This information service contains industry employment statistics and 1970 Census data. EEOC makes a comparative analysis on a nationwide basis of population statistics and industry employment data. This analysis is done annually. This hardcopy displays census information similar in format to the EEO-1 Employment Analysis Report Program (EARP). Job categories as defined by EEOC are similar in definition, but not as inclusive as job categories used by the Census Bureau. Labor force data from the Fourth Count 1970 Census of Population can be shown for industries and geographic areas.

Authority: Export-Import Bank Act of 1945 (P.L. 79-173). Export-Import Bank Act Amendments of 1974 (P.L. 93-646).

Availability: Agency; GPO

Geographic Relevance: International/Foreign

Abstract: The annual report provides an overall view of the financial condition and other areas of importance of the Export-Import Bank's undertakings during the preceding fiscal year. Since the Export-Import Bank is a government corporation, this report provides information relating to the Bank's operation which must be made available to the general public. The Bank's accounting records serve as the primary source of information for the report. The annual report presents an overall picture of the financial condition and major activities of the Export-Import Bank. Summaries of changes in management, impacting legislation, financial condition, and program directions which have occurred during the year are presented. Activity in major program areas is reviewed briefly. Financial data which are presented include: five-year authorization summary; financial statements for the year; loan, guarantee, and insurance authorizations by country and area; details of credits authorized; and credits authorized for purchase of goods from a U.S. entity by a foreign subsidiary of that entity. Lists of the Bank's directors and officers are included.

Abstract: The Field Operations Bureau is the local enforcement arm of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). It provides points of contact between the public and the FCC throughout the United States. The Bureau maintains 6 regional offices and operates 25 district offices and 13 monitoring stations throughout the nation and its possessions. The principal responsibilities of the Field Operations Bureau are: responding to requests for corrective actions or problems of interference with authorized communications experienced by Commission licensees and the public; furnishing advice and information to the public, radio users, and other government agencies on communications matters; and administration of radio operator examinations. A portion of the field staff directly assists the public at the local level by answering questions, participating in educational programs on the proper use of radio, conducting the radio operator licensing program in the field, and serving as local distribution outlets for required FCC forms.

Abstract: The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Library is designed to plan, organize, and manage a comprehensive collection in the field of telecommunications and related subjects such as law, engineering, science, economics, and management and to provide research the general public. The library contains books, periodicals, professional journals, technical reports, pamphlets, loose-leaf services, legal reporter services, legislative histories, and automated information retrieval systems. Library holdings consist of specialized reference and research collections in the Commission's areas of expertise, including such topics as electronics, digital communications, fiber optics, electronic mail and electronic transfers of funds, television (both technical and sociological studies), public utility regulation, accounting, statistics, management, microeconomics, and international and copyright law. The library also maintains court citation files and legislative histories concerning telecommunications. The library contains more than 45,000 accessioned volumes; subscribes to over 350 professional journals, indexes, and abstracts; retains over 27,000 legislative histories; and has 5,000 entries in its vertical file. The library provides research, literature and reference services to the Commission staff and the public ranging from brief consultation with users regarding available sources to involved questions which require extensive research. Reference services include locating material in the FCC Library and other libraries by means of interlibrary loan, development of brief or extended bibliographies, and use of automated information retrieval systems.

Abstract: To comply with existing legislation, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) publishes in the FCC Reports all documents which are adopted by the Commission en bloc and which have precedential or historical significance. The FCC Reports are published monthly in pamphlet form and are subsequently compiled and published in bound volumes. Decisions, reports, public notices, and other official documents of the FCC form the substance of the FCC Reports. The first series of FCC Reports consists of 45 volumes and covers the period July, 1934 to July, 1965. The second series of FCC Reports covers the period July, 1965 to the present. In addition to decisions and reports, the FCC Reports includes names of main interested parties, states and localities involved, and station call letters. A major portion of the index digest includes an abstract of each Commission document printed in the reports. The index digest also includes: a table of documents by title and main parties; a table of station call letters; a table of localities referred to; a subject digest; a digest by statutory and rule provisions; and an index of descriptive terms. A case name index was added beginning with Volumes 79/80 for period August 22, 1980 to October 24, 1980. Summaries of Commission actions which were not printed in full are included in the volumes.

Geographic Relevance: National

Abstract: The Federal Communications Commission's (FCC's) Public Affairs Office is responsible for planning, organizing, implementing, and making official announcements, in releasing news of Commission activities, and in responding to inquiries from the news media. It prepares and disseminates informational publications and materials and acts as the major source of information and point of contact with the press and communications industries concerned with the Commission and its activities. The materials released to the public by the Public Affairs Office include: official Commission actions issued in the form of opinions, orders, and other formal documents; special Commission press announcements, speeches, and reports; and press conferences, briefings, and seminars on issues of special importance or controversy. The Public Affairs Office develops and implements public information programs and policies; introduces measures to promote effective dissemination of Commission news and activities to all communications media; prepares and issues news releases, public notices, and other official pronouncements on Commission actions; responds to inquiries and requests for information; and prepares the Commission's annual report to Congress, as well as special public interest information releases. The Office maintains liaison with the media and other interested groups; organizes press conferences, briefings, and seminars on issues of special importance or controversy; develops and maintains public information and reference aids on topics of recurring public interest; and maintains and distributes a series of information bulletins which provide detailed information on topics of interest to the public. The Office of Public Affairs also handles implementation of the Commission's policies for promoting minority ownership of telecommunications. It acts as a source of information for minorities interested in telecommunications entrepreneurship, as well as acting as an advocate before the Commission on behalf of minority ownership.

Abstract: The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) Organization Manual serves as a supplement to the functional statements contained in Part O of the FCC Rules and Regulations. It provides Commission staff with an official statement of the currently approved organizational structure and functional assignments for purposes of: relating organization structure and functions to Commission objectives and programs; identifying organizational responsibilities and relationships; preparing position descriptions; indoctrinating new employees; and other appropriate uses. Functional statements for existing units within FCC bureaus and offices and approved organizational changes comprise the input for this document. Organizational elements within bureaus and offices of the FCC are identified and functional statements for both the parent bureaus/offices and subelements of the bureaus/offices are presented. The manual is updated as changes are made in the organizational structure of bureaus/offices. The manual is separated into a section for each bureau and office with additional sections for administrative material pertinent to organization and functional descriptions.

Abstract: The list of entries for transmitting equipment considered acceptable for licensing is published semiannually by the Commission. The determination of additions or deletions is made by the Equipment Authorization Branch, Office of Science and Technology. The data are derived from the Application for Equipment Authorization FCC Form 731, submitted by all radio equipment manufacturers seeking authorization for transmitting equipment acceptable for licensing. The data cover the elements by manufacturer, equipment type, FCC rules under which equipment is acceptable, frequency range and transmitting power to transmitting equipment. The manufacturers apply to the FCC to have their equipment listed as acceptable for licensing. Radio stations may use equipment that the FCC has listed. The list is updated annually, on-line, and published periodically as appropriate. The principal reports are the annual Public Notices, annual Gray Book (equipment acceptable for licensing) Report, and the periodic supplement to the Gray Book Report.

Abstract: This document provides a listing of conference, rate, and major cooperative working arrangements of common carriers in U.S. foreign commerce. The entries are available to conferences, carriers, shippers, attorneys, government agencies, and other parties subject to the Shipping Act of 1916. Input is both external and internal. Information is obtained from agreements among carriers and/or any parties operating in the U.S. foreign commerce and subject to the Shipping Act of 1916. Internal data are from the records of the Bureau of Agreements. This publication provides data on approved conference, rate, on interconference, pooling, and joint service agreements, and on selective major cooperative working arrangements of steamship lines in the foreign commerce of the United States. It contains an alphabetical and a numerical index of agreements and a listing of agreements by trade areas. Information is supplied on conference members, intermodal authority extent and implementation, and, where appropriate, the extent to which the agreement parties are authorized to apply dual rate contracts to inland services. The document is updated annually.

Abstract: This study examines the costs and benefits of import restrictions in five consumer goods industries where imports are significantly restricted. The five industries are citizen band (CB) radios, color television, textiles, non-rubber footwear, and sugar. In four of the five cases, the study concludes that the costs of import restrictions--the dead weight loss to the U.S. economy--is substantially greater than the benefits--the losses suffered by workers in a protected industry who would lose their jobs if protection were ended. In the fifth case, that of color television, it is found that the restrictions on the importation of Japanese-made goods merely caused production to be shifted to other foreign countries. In addition, the authors find that orderly marketing agreements--bilateral agreements with a producing country to limit the quantity of a good exported to the United States--are much more costly to the U.S. economy than are comparably restrictive tariffs.

Availability: Internal Use Only

Abstract: The primary center mission at this location is to store, service, and safeguard records of separated military personnel, officer and enlisted, and selected organizational, medical, and other military records. Personnel records of all federal government civilian and military employees are retired to this center. The Center maintains personnel records of former members of the Armed Forces of the United States Coast Guard and of separated civilian employees of the federal government, as well as other designated records. The military and civilian personnel records are housed in separate locations within metropolitan St. Louis, MO. Organizationally, the former Military Personnel Records Center and the former Federal Records Center were merged into a single center named National Personnel Records Center. From an agency viewpoint, however, there are no changes in the locations, functions, or services provided by the former centers. Records of separated military personnel, including the U.S. Coast Guard, and other designated records of components of the Department of Defense are retired to the National Personnel Records Center (Military Personnel Records). The military personnel records in the custody of the National Personnel Records Center (Military Personnel Records) consist of more than 72 million personnel and medical files of veterans who have served in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Coast Guard. To these are added on a continuing basis the records of personnel separated from these services. Personnel and pay records of separated civilian employees of the federal government are retired to the National Personnel Records Center (Civilian Personnel Records). Each federal agency transfers the following types of records. Official personnel folders of separated employees and comparable files accumulated before official personnel folders, as such, were established; individual earnings cards (such as Standard Form 1127 or its equivalent) or comprehensive payrolls or individual pay folders, and service records cards dated on or before December 31, 1947.

Abstract: The program has been instituted to provide for interagency sharing of common-use computer programs and systems. The Federal Software Exchange Center (FSEC) will provide a central point for agencies to exchange programs, technical information, and experience in software and system development. The objectives are to provide for the collection of common-use software information, development and maintenance of a listing of common-use software to minimize the redevelopment of programs already tested and in use elsewhere, publication and distribution of a software exchange catalog containing abstracts of common-use software, dissemination of common-use software and/or documentation, and reduction of overall costs, time, and use of personnel resources for software acquisition and/or development. Federal agencies are required to continually review software within their agency to identify programs or systems which would be of use to other agencies. Abstracts of the software are to be submitted to the Federal Software Exchange Center on SF-185, Federal Information Processing Standard Software Summary. The inventory contains common-use software and its documentation developed or revised by either government or contractor personnel. Software is all programs and routines used to extend the capabilities of computers, including independent subroutines, related group of routines, single programs, and sets or systems of programs. Documentation consists of a short narrative of the software, user instructions, logic flow charts, sample inputs/outputs, and program listings. Output includes: 1) Federal Software Exchange Catalog--a hard-copy publication composed of three quarterly updates and a cumulative annual containing abstracts of software submitted to the center; and 2) software and related documentation--available separately or as a package upon request to the Federal Software Exchange Center.

Abstract: 44 U.S.C. 21 authorizes the National Archives and Records Service to provide reference services to the general public and the federal government on permanently valuable historical records of the federal government and on historical materials in Presidential libraries.

Congress, and from the judicial branch. Private papers and other documents from private sources may be accepted for deposit. Records of the federal government and documents from private sources may be documentary material in any form, including books, papers, maps, photographs, and machine-readable materials. Records are arranged in record groups reflecting their source. Archival records of federal agencies may be any permanently valuable historical data made or received by an agency of the United States government under federal law or in connection with the transaction of public business and appropriate for preservation as evidence of the organization, function, policy decisions, procedures, operations, or other activities of the government or because of the informational value of data in them. Private papers and other documents from private sources accepted for deposit have similarly appropriate historical value. Some records predate the existence of the federal government, and most are at least 20 years old. Records are not updated, but accretions to records series are added. Preliminary inventories of record groups, microfilm publications of records, guides to record subjects reference service reports, and reference letters are prepared.

Availability: GPO

Abstract: The Consolidated List of Debarred, Suspended, and Ineligible Contractors is a comprehensive listing of business concerns and individuals (contractors) excluded from receiving federal contracts. The list is issued pursuant to the Office of Federal Procurement Policy (OFPP) Policy Letter 82-1. Additional information concerning the list is available in Federal Acquisition Regulation 9.4. The first function of the list is to notify federal agency contracting officials of those contractors which are barred government-wide from participating in federal contracting programs. Such exclusions may be based on the administrative debarment or suspension of a contractor by any agency on or after August 30, 1982, in accordance with OFPP Policy Letter 82-1, or on a similar action by an agency on the authority provided by statute or executive order. Second, the list circulates information concerning those contractors administratively debarred or suspended by agencies before August 30, 1982.

Abstract: This publication is intended to advise prospective shippers of household goods of the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission under 49 CFR 1056 intended to protect the rights of consumers who move their household goods between interstate points. Under the provisions of 49 CFR 1056, carriers are required to furnish a copy of the booklet to every prospective shipper and to obtain a receipt therefor. The primary sources for the pamphlet are the regulations of the Commission under 49 CFR 1056. The content and format of the publication was prescribed in a formal rulemaking proceeding and may not be changed except by order of the Commission. Essentially, the booklet is a consumer information publication intended to inform the novice household goods shipper of the more significant consumer protection regulations applying to the transportation of household goods by an authorized carrier. The prospective shipper is informed of the regulatory obligations of the carrier and the rights and obligations of the shipper. The publication is periodically revised, under a formal Commission proceeding, to reflect new or amended regulations. No specific revision schedule has been established.

Availability: Agency

Abstract: The Legislative Histories pertaining to the Interstate Commerce Act, its amendments, and related acts were established to provide a background and history of the act and related acts. This information is used for evaluation of proposed legislation, the development of proposed legislation, and historical information of the act and related acts. The data are derived from the Congressional Record, the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications, and other checklists and indexes of Congress. The Legislative Histories pertaining to the Interstate Commerce Act, its amendments, and related acts consist of congressional bills; committee reports, prints, and hearings; debates as recorded in the Congressional Record; slip laws; and other materials related to the legislation. Basically, they include the public documents that reveal the history of the enactment of specific laws of interest to the Commission. The two principal reports from this source are the Daily Congressional Record Index (produced when Congress is in session) and the Legislative Histories (prepared periodically when Congress is in session).

Abstract: This study provides the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) with information on rail costs for use in its regulatory function and makes available to the public cost information useful to carriers, shippers, traffic organizations, rate bureaus, educators, and others interested in transportation issues. The cost data make it possible to develop costs for shipments having a wide variety of characteristics and provides the user with the means to make a wide variety of cost comparisons among the seven rail cost territories in the United States for the Year 1977. Data included are: (1) carload unit costs; (2) intraterminal and interterminal switching costs; (3) allowance for circuitry; (4) gain and by type of cars; (5) 1974-1978, (7) private car return, (8) take weight, (9) treatment of special services, (10) treatment of switching costs; and (11) percent empty return of equipment.

Abstract: This study provides the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) with information on motor costs for use in its regulatory functions and makes available to the public cost information useful to carriers, shippers, traffic organization, rate bureaus, educators, and others interested in the cost of transportation. The study provides costs of transporting freight by motor common carriers within and between the various cost regions and territories of the United States. These cost data make it possible to develop costs for shipments having a wide variety of characteristics and provide the user with the means to make cost comparisons among the cost regions. Data included are: (1) variable expenses, service units, and variable units cost for cost study carriers for the study year 1979; (2) variable terminal costs at origin and destination for shipments up to 40,000 pounds; (3) variable line-haul costs per hundredweight-mile by weight brackets and mileage blocks; (4) density adjustments; and (5) variable unit costs for handling at interchange and at intermediate points. Published in bound book format for the following regions: New England Group I, New England Group II, Central, Middle Atlantic, Southern, Midwest, Southwest, Rocky Mountain and Pacific Regions, Eastern-Central, East-South, South-Central, and Transcontinental Territories.

Availability: Agency
Abstract: The Technical Information Service of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA-TIS) acquires worldwide aerospace literature in the form of journal articles, conference papers, and books; abstracts and indexes them; publishes an announcement journal, International Aerospace Abstracts (IAA); reproduces many of the accessioned items in microfiche under agreement with the copyright holders; provides a public sales agency for copies of announced publications; and submits computer-readable cataloging data into the NASA Scientific and Technical Information Facility data base. The literature abstracted and indexed by AIAA-TIS includes scientific and technical journals, reprints, foreign university dissertations, conference proceedings, and books. All sciences and technologies related to aerospace and NASA research and development, energy programs, earth resources, and aerospace project management is represented in the acquired publications. The AIAA-TIS is a major contributor to the full NASA-TIS system of over 2 million document citations, having entered the published literature since 1962. Scope and searchability are the same as that of the report and other citations in the central data bank. Input of data and publication of IAA are on the same biweekly update cycle. International Aerospace Abstracts (IAA), an abstract journal issued biweekly and available on subscription from the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, New York, NY, announces the aerospace published literature of journal articles, conference papers, and books. All citations to IAA-announced publications are part of the central data bank in the NASA Scientific and Technical Information System; therefore they are included in literature searches, RECON displays, bibliographies, and NASA/SCAN. Microfilm and hardcopies of a portion of the announced publications are available from AIAA.

Shuttle Information Service (SIS).

OMB Funding Code/Title: 80-0108-0-1-253 / Research and development Program: Space Flight, Control and Data Communications (All Programs)

Congressional Relevance: House Appropriations Committee: Transportation Subcommittee; House Committee on Science and Technology; Senate Appropriations Committee: Transportation Subcommittee; Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation

Authority: National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958 (P.L. 85-568).

Availability: Agency

Abstract: This system is designed to provide a single authoritative source of information regarding Shuttle documents generated by Shuttle organization and Shuttle contractors. The SIS is to identify and point out the existence, location, and source of information and in certain cases supply the requested information/documentation. To help insure the completeness of the SIS information files, SIS will exchange documentation/information between NASA centers and with the U.S. Air Force Space Transportation System Program Office. Input is from scientific, technical, and engineering groups located at each of the NASA centers and their contractors; and other supporting organizations, including other U.S. government agencies and their contractors. Input includes technical reports, specifications, drawings, standards, and technical analyses. Shuttle Information Content includes communications, electronics, heat transfer, fluid mechanics, instrumentation, photography, quality assurance and reliability, structural mechanics, metallic and nonmetallic materials, aerodynamics, propulsion, medical information, spaceborne experiments, spacecraft design and testing, payloads, engineering drawings, and configuration records. The scope of the information is from 1965 to date, continuing as research proceeds. The files are updated weekly and cover all geographical areas. The SIS can provide information pertaining to an automated Document Index System (DIS) which facilitates retrieval of documents maintained in the JSC technical library, where information output on specific documents or specific subject content is generated via an online CRT computerized system. Information is obtained by accession number, corporate source, report number, contract number, personal author, main subject terms, and local JSC number, list by date, program or project, or office of prime responsibility. There are no recurring reports. The majority of output is by CRT with the option of hardcopy printouts.

Availability: Internal Use Only

improved printouts and services while achieving the economies of centralized indexing, cataloging, and computer processing. With broad scope of coverage of publications related to aeronautics and space research, earth resources, energy, and other NASA research and development topics, NALNET is primarily for the use of NASA professionals and libraries, but searches are also made for NASA Industrial Applications Centers to assist in technology spinoff. The NALNET data bank input consists of bibliographic records of books received by the NASA libraries after 1968, all journal titles and selected citations from the Library of Congress Machine Readable Catalog Book and journal records of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics will shortly be incorporated into the network. NALNET subject content covers the broad interests of NASA research and development, management, data processing, and other aspects of aeronautics and space technology and all the sciences related to space studies or the needs of space exploration, including geology, medicine, engineering, electronics, and biology. On-line identification and search via CRT display is possible. Computer-punched catalog cards; union book and periodicals listings; local current book accession lists; local book shelflists and surplus lists; and local indexed catalogs are also generated. Searches may be made by title, author, Library of Congress or NASA terms, National Library of Medicine terms, LC card numbers, various classifications, corporate sources, and report numbers.

Abstract: This system is designed to provide a bibliographic information base to all research in the field of lunar and planetary science, including published literature, government documents, conference papers, and books. The service is intended for the use of the entire lunar and planetary science community including principal investigators, educators, and students. Selection of the information is made from the published journals, review of abstracting services such as International Aerospace Abstracts, Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, Bibliography and Index of Geology, Meteorological and Geostrophysical Abstracts, and subject searches conducted by the Institute for Scientific Information. Content covers all research on the moon from 1950 to the present, with greatest percentage of coverage since 1978. Coverage includes: the moon, planets, asteroids, meteorites and comets. Astronomy, geology, photogeology and geophysical investigations are included also. Automated searches by author or combinations of authors and title keywords are done on request. Current references are published in the Lunar and Planetary Information Bulletin (Lunar and Planetary Institute) and in The Moon and Planets (Reidel Publishing Co.).

Abstract: This publication represents the NASA Research and Technology program for FY 1984. It is a compilation of the "Summary" portions of each of the RTOPs (Research and Technology Objectives and Plans) used for management review and control of research currently in progress throughout NASA. The "RTOP Summary" is designed to facilitate communication and coordination among concerned technical personnel in government, in industry, and in universities. We believe also that this publication can help to expedite the technology transfer process.

Availability: NTIS

Abstract: NSSDC furthers the widest practicable use of reduced data obtained from, or related to, space science experiments and provides U.S. investigators with a central repository for such data. Similar services are provided to scientists residing outside the United States through World Data Center A for Rockets and Satellites. Research work also can be performed online by resident and visiting scientists. NSSDC collects, organizes, stores, announces, retrieves, disseminates, and exchanges data and information received from satellite experiments, sounding-rocket probes, and high-altitude aeronautical investigations. Data and documentation are received from principal investigators as well as from World Data Centers B (USSR) and C (England) for Rockets and Satellites. NSSDC's System for Information Retrieval and Storage (SIRS) consists of four main information files. The Automated Internal Management (AIM) file provides characteristics of each spacecraft, experiment, and data set that have been identified in a hierarchical arrangement. The Technical Reference File (TRF) contains descriptions of publications and technical documents that are used as reference materials. The Rocket File includes information that names and describes all scientific rocket launchings identified by NSSDC. The NSSDC Supplementary Data File contains data from sources other than satellite experiment flights and composite data sets from flight investigations. Data are in the fields of astronomy, geophysics and geomagnetism, ionospheric physics, meteorology, particles and fields, planetary atmospheres, planetary, and solar physics.

Abstract: The Credit Union Statistics provide selected monthly financial and economic data on a seasonally adjusted and unadjusted basis. Survey data from 1,100 participating federally-chartered and state-chartered credit unions serve as the basis for estimating credit union growth, savings and loan flows, liquidity, investment trends, and key operating ratios that reflect conditions within the Credit Union industry. Statistics provide estimates of consumer savings and installment credit held by credit unions and published by the Federal Reserve. Monthly data are analyzed for internal management purposes, research, and policy decisions and for incorporation in the preparation of the Agency's Financial Plan.

Abstract: The Annual Report of the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) provides a textual assessment of economic conditions; credit union operations and relevant balance sheet developments; review of examination and insurance programs; legal developments and proposed regulations affecting federal credit unions; responsibilities of internal audit and investigation; summary of Office of Policy Analysis research programs; administrative and financial developments; and NCUA Regional developments. It presents detailed end-of-year statistics on operations of all federal credit unions and federally insured state credit unions by type of charter, Standard Federal Administrative Region, state, type of membership, asset size, and age. Approximately 17,000 insured credit unions submit balance sheet data to permit analysis of conditions within the Credit Union community. Data are utilized to evaluate credit union operations, measure impact of national and regional economic developments, adjust monthly survey results, assist credit unions to assess their performance relative to peer groups and the credit unions industry, project future developments, formulate policy, and document congressional testimony.

Abstract: The Guide to Programs describes the goals and grant programs of the National Endowment for the Arts. Summary guidelines for all grant programs are included so that potential applicants can determine whether to make application for grant funds. The "Guide to Programs" contains summary guidelines to all Arts Endowment grant programs. These guidelines are developed by advisory panels of experts representing the various arts disciplines and in response to the needs for assistance as expressed in the field. Guidelines are also reviewed by the National Council on the Arts, the 26 member body appointed by the President, which makes final recommendations to the Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts before final guidelines for each program are approved each year. Grant programs include: Artists in Education Program, Dance Program, Design Arts Program, Expansion Arts Program, Folk Arts Program, Inter-Arts Programs, Literature Program, Media Arts: Film/Radio/Television Program, Museum Program, Music Program, Opera-Musical Theater Program, State Programs, Theater Program, Visual Arts Program, Endowment Fellowship Program (Work Experience Internship Program), and Challenge Grant Program.

Abstract: The purpose of the National Endowment for the Arts Library is twofold: to maintain a technical reference collection for agency staff and to collect those materials that document the programs and activities of the agency. The library serves in-house staff, other libraries through inter-library loan, and occasional researchers and visitors. The library requires books, periodicals, pamphlets, preprints, dissertations, theses, newspapers, press releases, indexes, yearbooks, reports, directories of organizations, internal and external technical reports, tape recordings, legislative materials, catalogs, handbooks, manuals, dictionaries, directories, atlases, and annual reports. In addition, the library seeks to acquire all publications issued by the Endowment and all publications resulting from Endowment grants and contracts. The library is a working collection of resources on all aspects of the arts in contemporary America; their promotion, financing, organization, management, development, and preservation. Items related to the agency's history and activities are also available. Varied holdings include 5,000 catalogued documents, 300 periodical titles, and 10 drawers of vertical file material on topical subjects.

Abstract: The volume provides a resource guide identifying federal funds and services for the arts and humanities. Information was obtained from federal agencies and quasi-federal agencies and programs that offer funds and services for the arts and other cultural activities. Cultural Directory II updates the 1975 edition and has been expanded to include descriptions of federal government support for the humanities as well as the arts. More than 300 programs and activities, administered by 38 federal and quasi-federal agencies are described that offer assistance to individuals, institutions, and organizations. Some give financial aid in the form of grants, loans, contracts, or stipends; others offer employment opportunities; still others provide services such as information, technical assistance, managerial counseling, traveling exhibits, reference collections and services, statistical data, and training opportunities. Program descriptions include information on eligibility requirements, grant amounts and examples of projects funded in the past, and a contact for information.

Geographic Relevance: International/Foreign; National; State

Abstract: This report is a statistical supplement to the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board's Annual Report required under Section 7(h)(6) of the Railroad Retirement Act, enacted October 16, 1974, and Section 12(f) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, enacted June 25, 1938. Input is obtained from three major Railroad Retirement Board Operation systems: 1) Railroad Employers Creditable Compensation Recording System, including Annual Form BA-6, Certificate of service months and Compensation, and various referral files; 2) Railroad Retirement, Disability and Survivor Benefit Payment System (including Medicare), including the daily check issue file, tax credit file, supplemental annuity file, financial reports, and various referral files, and 3) Railroad Unemployment and Sickness Insurance Benefit Payment System, including the daily unemployment and sickness benefit payment file from which Treasury issues checks to beneficiaries, financial reports, and various referral files. Information received from output of these operations is processed by the Bureau of Data Processing (tape file information) and by the Bureau of Actuary and Research (hardcopy files). This processing produces the information included in the publication. The tables in this volume include data on the Railroad Retirement and Railroad Unemployment Insurance programs for the current fiscal year, previous calendar year, and, in some tables, for earlier years. They are presented in four sections: financial statistics, retirement and survivor benefit statistics, unemployment and sickness benefit statistics, and employment, compensation, and coverage statistics.

Abstract: This manual provides guidance for Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) staff engaged in investment company examinations. The manual is designed to provide comprehensive and important guidelines to the examiner so that he will be alert to possible violations of the securities laws and regulations and will be able to interview and develop from an examination of the books and records and operations the information necessary to recommend further action. The manual was compiled by regional office staff together with staff of the Division of Investment Management Regulation. The manual contains details of procedures and laws with which the investment company examiner should be familiar and provides guidelines for recognizing weak spots in a firm and possible violations of the securities laws. In addition to background information, which includes discussions of types of investment companies, relevant laws and regulations, forms filed by the companies, and preparation for compliance examinations, the manual presents extensive discussion of investment company compliance examination procedures related to financial analysis, investment activities, management functions, and sales and liquidations of investment company shares. Guidelines for completing the examination and preparing the report are also included.

Abstract: The purpose of this manual is to bring together on a current basis information concerning the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 which will be useful to the members of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) staff engaged in the processing of an application for qualification of an indenture. The manual was prepared by SEC staff members. The manual includes material originally compiled in 1952, updated through inclusion of administrative interpretations and proceedings since that date. The manual contains a summary of administrative interpretations under Sections 310-318, inclusive of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939. The manual presents a description of each section of the statute as contained in the House report on the bill, together with a discussion of the various problems which have arisen under that section. Variations suggested in the so-called "model" indenture published by Commerce Clearing House are also noted. References have been inserted to judicial and administrative interpretations and proceedings relating to the sections covered, and typical deficiencies are noted.

Abstract: This report is the result of the charge to the Advisory Committee on Corporate Disclosure, created by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), to identify the characteristics and functions of the present system of corporate disclosure and the role of the SEC within that system, to assess the costs and benefits of the system, to articulate the objectives of a system of corporate disclosure and to measure the SEC's present disclosure policies against those objectives; and to formulate recommendations to the SEC for policy adjustments necessary to better effectuate those objectives. The Advisory Committee held meetings, conducted a comprehensive questionnaire and interview study of the primary participants in the corporate disclosure system, consulted with experts, and examined pertinent studies and research reports, some prepared expressly for the committee. The report describes the role of various participants in the disclosure process, presents recommendations concerning SEC procedures in developing disclosure requirements and standards, presents recommendations regarding substantive disclosure requirements, and discusses the disclosure environment, including a historical presentation and discussion of mandated disclosure and liability provisions of the two major laws affecting disclosure. The Appendix to the Report contains discussion of the research program, copies of tools used in the study, data from the study, and reports and comments utilized in the preparation of this report.

Abstract: The facility is designed to provide investors with financial material and information concerning securities offered for public sale, to extend the disclosure doctrine, and to protect investors from fraud. Through the maintenance of a public reference room where financial and other business data are available for inspection and copying, the public obtains the information that enables them to make informed decisions. The data in the Public Reference Room consists of applications, registrations, and reports that are filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) by public entities and reporting persons. Additionally, information published or released by the SEC--announcements, opinions, statements, speeches, rule changes, etc.--are also provided to the Public Reference Room. Information may be examined free of cost or purchased at about $.10 a page. The Public Reference Room maintains or can obtain in paper or microform any public information that has been filed with the SEC. Such information includes, but is not limited to, registration statements, applications, periodic reports, ownership reports by insiders, proxy solicitation material, announcements, releases, opinions, statements, and proposals by the SEC and, in short, all public material in the SEC's official records whether such files are active or in storage in the federal records center.

Abstract: This general statement of policy is intended to help the Congress, the investing public, and the securities industry fully understand the views of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) on the present status of the securities markets and the direction in which the public interest requires that they evolve in the future. This statement is based on the data and testimony accumulated in a series of hearings and special studies extending over a period of three and a half years. This series included examination of questions related to the structure, organization, and regulations of the securities markets; questions related to commission rates and give-up practices; and questions related to the operational efficiency and financial responsibility of firms making up the broker-dealer community. This policy statement focuses on what can be done now to assure the public that the market structure is responsive to its needs. The policies set forth are designed to deal with specific problems which have developed in the securities markets and to preserve and strengthen specific capabilities which the markets have developed. The major objectives of the policies adopted by the SEC in this report are 1) to make the relationships in the securities markets and their operation as simple, as direct, and as open as possible, 2) to adapt the securities markets to growing institutionalization, while maintaining the confidence and the participation of the individual investor, and 3) to make the professional service available to investors as efficient and economic as possible without diluting standards of service and responsibility.

Abstract: This report in Congress, mandated in the 1975 amendments to the Securities Exchange Act, examines the possible need for modifications of the scheme of self-regulation provided in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, so as to adapt it to a national market system. Input for this report was developed through public meetings held for two days each month since October 1975; advice from ten voluntary technical consultants from broker-dealers, self-regulatory organizations, and independent consulting or service firms; and comments submitted voluntarily by some fifty sources in response to general and specific appeals for advice. Discussion in this report focusses on the steps taken recently or about to be taken towards the establishment of a national market system and the relation of these steps to the scheme of self-regulation, including the formation of component facilities and linking of markets, the strengthening of competition, and the increasing efficiency of transaction processing. Coordination among the self-regulatory organizations is also examined, including questions related to the overlapping authority and duplication of regulatory efforts, establishing and administering new national market system facilities, and facilitating participation in the process of establishing a national market system. Background material on the report is also presented.

Abstract: This guide is intended to provide a model compliance program for securities industry personnel which will provide an awareness of existing requirements and suggest procedures by which the industry can comply with those requirements. The guide is based first of all on the existing laws and rules and regulations related to the securities industry. Input regarding the guidelines for broker-dealer compliance were developed through public meetings of the Advisory Committee on Broker-Dealer Compliance and through responses of the public, the broker-dealer community, the securities associations, the securities bar, and the accounting profession. The guide points out regulatory requirements, delineates problem areas, and suggests appropriate compliance procedures. Regulations and suggested compliance procedures are presented for each of the following activity areas: supervision; broker-dealer and personnel registration, financial and operations responsibility; customer accounts; oversight of branch offices; advertising and sales literature; investment advisory services; private placements; proprietary trading; research and recommendations; underwriting; bonds and other debt instruments; mutual funds and other investment companies; options; tax sheltered programs; viable contracts; blue sky law regulation; foreign operations; and electronic data processing

Abstract: This report investigates the knowledge of the City and its officials, particularly the Mayor and the Comptroller, regarding transactions in securities of the City of New York and the events surrounding the City's fiscal crisis. The study was prepared by the SEC staff. This chapter of the report, comprising the entire volume here presented, examines the role of the New York City government and its officials in the securities transactions of the City. Background information on the organization of the City government and the budgetary process are presented. The report extensively examines the knowledge of the City and its officials regarding facts material to the issuance of City debt securities in the period from October 1974 through March 1975. The following particular areas are examined: knowledge concerning overstatement of federal and state and local real estate tax receivables; knowledge concerning the risk of non-marketability of city securities; awareness of problems with the debt limit and unencumbered debt margin; material uncertainties as to the existence of a first lien for the principal of short-term notes; the TAN offering; pension fund transactions; and the use of assets of the Transit Unification Sinking Fund. The City's version of full and fair disclosure is examined through discussion of the press releases and public statements disseminated by the Mayor and the Comptroller and of the City's financial reports.

Abstract: The Institution performs research in the fields of anthropology, astrophysics, biology, geology, paleontology, cultural and political history, and the history of technology, publishes the results of explorations, studies, and investigations; preserves objects and specimens for study and reference; and displays them in permanent, special, and traveling exhibitions. The Institution participates in the international exchange of governmental and scholarly publications; conducts fellowship and other higher education programs; presents a wide array of workshops, classes, lectures, seminars, and symposia; publishes the Smithsonian magazine; and produces radio and television programs. Smithsonian research, exhibition, education programs, and other functions are based on data stemming from a variety of sources: Terrestrial (including archeological and anthropological), marine, and astrophysical observations; objects and specimens in the national collections and information bearing on their source, composition, attribution; archives and library materials; oral histories, and live performances and presentations. Principal collections, subject matters, and information include anthropology; aeronomics and astronomy; astrophysics and astronomy; botany, entomology, mineral sciences, paleontology, and vertebrate and invertebrate zoology; American portraiture, Far and Near Eastern Art; American paintings and sculpture, decorative arts, crafts, and design; the applied arts; cultural history; industries, military, naval, and political history of the United States; the history of science and technology; animal conservation and management; misology and museum training; and conservation of museum specimens and artifacts. The Smithsonian Year, issued annually, documents the operations and financing of the Institution's museums, galleries, laboratories, and other activities. Other reports and output include exhibitions, exhibit and other catalogs, and research publications. These occur on a frequent basis throughout the year and appear in hardcopy form. Information on many objects and specimens in the National Collections is in computer storage. Output on these items can take the form of hardcopy, punched cards, or tapes. Similar information exists on the nationwide Bicentennial Inventory of American Paintings.

Abstract: SII collects and provides access to library materials which support research, exhibit, and educational programs in art, history, science, and technology. The collections created primarily serve historians, scientific researchers, exhibits specialists, and curators, who make up the staff of the Smithsonian, as well as visiting scholars and researchers. The public is also served through sharing of bibliographic data and through fellowships, seminars, exhibits, and tours. SII maintains close contact with the Library of Congress and other federal libraries to avoid duplication and maximize effectiveness. Information is collected on a worldwide basis in the form of published materials determined to be relevant to the art, history, science, and technology programs of the Smithsonian or specifically required to support a current research project. Materials collected include reports, proceedings, bulletins, annual reports, and other publications of museums, galleries, learned societies, and other national and international organizations engaged in research and education. The collections include primary and secondary source materials most of which are in book form. Significant subject specialties include systematic and evolutionary biology, anthropology, geological sciences, aviation history, American culture, the history of art and design, and the history of science and technology. Special features of the collections include an extensive historical collection of manufacturers' trade catalogs and the Dibner Collection of rare materials in the history of science and technology. SII maintains a union catalog of its bibliographic holdings which provides access to the intellectual content of the collections. This catalog is in computer output microfiche format as well as being available through the Online Computer Library Center, Inc. and can only be queried manually. Output is normally in the form of information given to the requester verbally or through access provided to relevant materials for use onsite or through interlibrary loan.

Congressional Relevance: House Committee on Foreign Affairs; Senate Committee on Foreign Relations; House Appropriations Committee:

Abstract: WMEAT is an annual publication which includes data for the previous 10 years for 145 countries in the world covering military expenditures and arms imports and exports. These data are updated and revised annually. WMEAT has a computer data base which can be used for data analysis and to answer data queries from other agencies and the public. WMEAT is one means of fulfilling ACDA's mandate to provide information to the executive and legislative branches of government on arms control. Most military expenditure and arms transfer data are obtained from the Department of Defense--economic data from the World Bank and the Department of Commerce, and population data from the Census Bureau. Subject matter includes military expenditures, armed forces, arms imports, arms exports, GNP, central government expenditures and population. Data are provided for each individual country in the world and are also aggregated to regional, alliance, group, and world levels. Data are provided over a 10-year time series for each variable. With each edition the 10-year series is moved ahead one year and revisions are made in the whole 10-year series when appropriate.

Abstract: Under the supervision of Office of Personnel Management

(OPM) area offices, the 59 Federal Job Information Centers (FJIC) provide answers to public inquiries concerning federal employment. The purpose of the FJIC network is to provide people with the information necessary to compete for federal job opportunities as they arise. The primary source for information is internal. OPM examination managers communicate their decisions on whether or not to accept applications for certain jobs to FJIC staff within their own area office. Information is provided to the public about jobs for which OPM is accepting applications within the area office jurisdiction; qualifications, requirements, and procedures for applying are made known to applications. Abstract: The Federal Personnel Manual (FPM), the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) official publication contains instructions to other agencies of the U.S. government on matters of personnel management. It is designed to meet the need for identification of the many laws, rules, regulations, and continuing instructions pertinent to personnel administration. Various Groups of the OPM provide the primary input for the manual. (See AM 45-1) Agencies may add material relating solely to agency functions or rules not covered in the FPM. The FPM consists of a basic manual and 28 separate supplements. Personnel management subjects are arranged with the convenience of agency personnel officers in mind. Both the basic manual and the supplements provide a format which facilitates additions by internal agency instructions. The basic manual is designed to give a source of ready information on the general policies and requirements in the program areas of personnel management. Examples of these programs areas are: general personnel provisions, employment, employment performance and utilization, position classification, pay and allowances, attendance, and leave. The supplements to the basic manual are designed to give full and detailed information regarding policies and procedures.

Abstract: The report provides a statistical and narrative information base for the Office of Personnel Management's Annual Report to the Congress. In addition, it provides feedback to federal departments and agencies, the OPM's Incentive Awards Program, the Agency Relations Group in OPM, and the General Accounting Office, for purposes of program evaluation and improvement. Responses are given to media and public inquiries concerning the Federal Incentive Awards Program.

Information is submitted on OPM Form 1465, Incentive Awards Program Annual Report, by Headquarters Incentive Awards Program Administrators of departments and agencies of the federal government. The report contains statistical and narrative information on the accomplishments of federal employees, beyond job responsibilities, that are recognized by cash or honorary recognition during a given fiscal year. Information is included on the numbers, types, and amounts of awards and quality increases, tangible benefits to the government, and awards granted by grade groupings. The information for the Office of Personnel Management's Annual Report to Congress provides feedback to federal departments and agencies, the OPM's Incentive Awards Program, and the General Accounting Office for purposes of program evaluation and improvement.

Abstract: The U.S. Information Agency Library provides Agency officers with a research and reference function covering a broad range of subjects and information. Bibliographies, chronologies, fact sheets, and reports are compiled for special projects and/or individual officers. Its Technical Services Branch orders books, magazines, and newspapers for staff use worldwide. Primary input sources are external and consist of books, periodicals, and newspapers purchased from private commercial publishers. Other external input sources are government documents, publications, and studies, reports, and monographs prepared by academic, research and special interest groups. Internal input consists of selected U.S. Information Agency scripts, features, and publications. The Agency Library general collections include a lending collection (for staff use only) of over 60,000 books and periodicals, reference materials, and newspapers. Other special collections include: a morgue of clippings from seven national newspapers, government documents, United Nations publications, studies, and reports. Archives containing material relating to the history of the Agency in the form of Congressional documents, books, articles, internal Agency communications, and a representative selection of Agency publications; a Classified Library consisting of classified and unclassified telegrams, pouch and field messages, airgrams, and Agency research reports; a collection of Russian books, periodicals, and newspapers in the Cyrillic alphabet; and the "Data Index System", a computerized data base of all classified and unclassified documents of historical value to the Agency.

Abstract: This handbook provides information on the automatic data processing (ADP) program in U.S. Information Agency (USIA), which provides for full disclosure of financial results; adequate data for management needs; effective control over funds, property, and other assets; reliable accounting support to USIA budget reports; and integration of USIA accounts with central accounting and reporting operations of the Treasury Department. The ADP System provides data at all sufficient management levels--Organization, cost center, subcost center or activity center, and function. In addition, a system of resource codes is included which provides descriptive types of expenses. The handbook is intended to be used as a training tool, as an aid for briefings, and as a congressional ADP budget document. It describes management responsibilities within USIA for developing and implementing the ADP program and contains an inventory of operating automated applications, both domestic and overseas.

This is required by the Administrative Procedure Act. Following the public comment period, the regulations are revised, as appropriate, to reflect the comments received. Once adopted by the NRC, they are published in the Federal Register in the final form with the date they become effective. After that publication, rules are codified and included annually in the Code of Federal Regulations (Title 10, Chapter 1). The regulatory guides are issued to describe and make available to the public methods acceptable to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) staff for implementing specific parts of the NRC's regulations, to delineate techniques used by the staff in evaluating specific problems or postulated accidents, and to provide guidance to applicants. External input to the guides consists of public comments, which are encouraged at all times. The guides will be revised as appropriate to accommodate comments and to reflect new information or experience. The guides are not substitutes for regulations, and compliance with them is not required. Methods and solutions different from those set out in the guides will be acceptable if they provide a basis for the findings requisite to the issuance or continuance of a permit or a license from the Commission. The guides are issued in the following ten broad divisions: power reactors, research and test reactors, fuels and materials facilities, environmental and siting, materials and plant protection, products, transportation, occupational health, and trust review and general.

and produces indexed bibliographies. The center provides safety evaluation services and replies to requests for information from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), the Department of Energy, and the nuclear community. Information obtained by the center includes research reports, licensing reports, abnormal occurrence reports, and other reports prepared as a result of NRC safety research and licensing work; publicly available reports on safety research and information published by reactor vendors, the Electric Power Research Institute, universities, and utilities; and reports received under various NRC foreign safety exchange programs. Analysis and appraisal of safety information is provided in all technical areas of nuclear powerplant operations related to safety, reactor operational safety and experience, accident prevention, and behavior of plant safety systems. The center's computer file contains over 160,000 abstracts, and it will respond to over 2,000 requests for information in Fiscal Year 1983. The center publishes the bimonthly Nuclear Safety Journal, indexed annotated topical bibliographies, and data compilations.

Abstract: The Local Public Document Room (LPDR) Branch of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission administers a nationwide public information program, the chief mission of which is provision of plant-specific, publicly-available documents within easily-accessible repositories located in the vicinity of each planned or operating U.S. power reactor. The LPDR Collections provide local citizens with access to documents considered by NRC during licensing, construction, operation, and decommissioning of commercial nuclear plants. Collection materials in both hardcopy and microfiche formats include publicly-available correspondence and other communications to and from NRC regarding structural permit, licensing, technical specifications, inspection reports, Freedom of Information Act materials, reportable and abnormal occurrence reports, and hearing transcripts associated with the particular facility. A selection of generic reports of general interest is also available at each LPDR. Reference sources include a number of recurring reference tools such as weekly and cumulative accession lists, indices to microfiche collections, a user's guide, a free brochure, and a quarterly newsletter. Personal reference assistance is available from the trained staff at each library housing an LPDR collection and from the LPDR hotline, (800) 638-8081, a toll-free telephone reference service. A reader/printer is provided at each Local Public Document Room for viewing and copying microfiche-format documents.

Abstract: This manual provides guidance to Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) staff in processing applications for licenses to construct or operate nuclear powerplants. The manual delineates the process used by the NRC in conducting safety reviews of the Preliminary Safety Analysis Report, the Final Safety Analysis Report, and other data submitted to the NRC by an applicant for a license to construct or operate a nuclear powerplant. The document is used as a guide for the review process. Modifications will be made as required based on review experience and data from operating reactors.

Abstract: This manual provides information on the policies, procedures, and instructions of the Office of Inspection and Enforcement pertaining to the inspections of holders of licenses and permits to construct or operate nuclear reactors and other persons licensed to use by-product, source, and special nuclear materials. The manual is designed for use by Federal inspectors of such facilities. Information presented in the manual is provided by the component units of the Office of Inspection and Enforcement, including the divisions of Quality Assurance, Safeguards and Inspection Programs, Emergency Preparedness and Engineering Response, Enforcement Staff, Technical Training Center, and Program Support Branch. The manual presents nontechnical information describing general operating methods of the Office of Inspection and inspection of licensees and contractor activities. The functional information is arranged by subject matter and consists of individual inspection procedures, including the inspection objectives, the inspection requirements, and guidance for conducting the inspection. Information on the scope and frequency of inspections is also included.

Abstract: This legal document is used by the importing business community to ascertain the appropriate commodity classification, dutiable status, statistical treatment, and other fundamental requirements necessary for the entry of foreign goods into the United States. TSUSA serves, also, as the official manual of the U.S. Customs Service in the classification, appraisal, and liquidation of goods, and, as such, is the source of all U.S. import statistics. The statistical provisions and reporting instructions contained in TSUSA are formulated by the interagency Committee for Statistical Annotation of Tariff Schedules. The primary object of the Committee is the improvement in the quality and utility of U.S. import, export, and production data. The principal subject matter contained in the TSUSA comprises legislative and executive instruction with respect to the customs treatment of imported goods and statistical reporting instructions. The basic editions of TSUSA and supplements therein are issued periodically (as needed). The current 1976 edition of the classification, dutiable status, and statistical treatment of imported goods; the publication also contains historical sections which enable researchers and others to track legislative, statistical, and other changes back to the effective date of TSUSA (August 31, 1963).

Geographic Relevance: International/Foreign

Abstract: The Synthetic Organic Chemical Reports provide a current compilation of all the producers and importers of these chemicals, their production, sales, and imports. These data are of use in the preparation of reports to the President and to the committees of Congress, background digests for all the GATT negotiations, perilpoint findings, and other investigations. Other government agencies and committees of Congress also use the Commission's synthetic organic chemical statistics and reports in their operations. Various public and private agencies utilize the Commission's synthetic organic chemical reports in planning new facilities, making market studies, buying new materials, and finding new markets and new sources of supply. The production quantity, sales quantity, and value data contained in these reports are compiled from data received from domestic manufacturers. The import data are obtained by analyzing invoices covering imports through the principal U.S. Customs Districts. The Synthetic Organic Chemicals, United States Production and Sales Report, published annually, covers the production quantity and sales quantity and value of more than 8,000 synthetic organic chemicals produced by more than 800 domestic manufacturers. The Imports of Benzeneoid Chemicals and Products Report, published annually, presents statistics on U.S. imports of benzeneoid chemicals and products, which are dutiable under the ASP system of duty assessment. The Report on U.S. Production of Selected Organic Chemicals, released monthly, covers a specified number of "trend" chemicals selected by government and industry on the basis of their economic importance, seasonality, and specified uses. Currently, the report covers 97 chemicals produced by approximately 300 domestic manufacturers. The Synthetic Organic Chemical Reports consist of the following reports: Synthetic Organic Chemicals: United States Production and Sales (annual; final and 14 preliminary reports); Imports of Benzeneoid Chemicals and Products (annual); and Selected Synthetic Organic Chemicals United States Production (monthly; Series C/P).

Abstract: The primary purpose of the Annual Report is to provide the Congress with an account of all moneys received and disbursed by the VA, and a description of the work and activity of the agency during each fiscal year. The report is required by 38 U.S.C. 214. With few exceptions the primary source is internal and includes Health Care, Compensation and Pension, Education Benefits, Housing Assistance, Life Insurance, Veterans Assistance, National Cemetery System and Administration and Management. The Annual Report consists of narrative, including charts, graphs, illustrations and statistical tables. The narrative focuses on the impact of VA programs on the welfare of veterans and the nation, with emphasis given to program developments during the year compared with previous years. The statistical tables present significant program financial and administrative data for the year, or at the close of the year. All aspects of VA operations are covered.

Abstract: The bulletin provides information on and analysis of education and training activity in the four programs defined by title 38, chapters 31, 32, 34, 35, and 36. The bulletin is used extensively both within and without the Veterans' Administration (VA). It is distributed to VA administrative staff, DVB field stations, House and Senate Veterans Affairs Committees, state agencies, and schools. Input is from internal sources. No effort is made to acquire data specifically for publication in the bulletin. Special studies, analyses, and survey results may be abstracted to be included in the bulletin, but only as a by-product of the study. The bulletin provides information on program definitions, including the post-Korean conflict, Vietnam Era, eligible children and spouses, and veterans eligible for vocational rehabilitation. Veterans educational assistance is explained, under the headings of veterans in training, junior college training, type of training, educationally disadvantaged trainees, and state comparison of GI Bill training, and other categories. A comparison of the three GI Bills is provided. Information is also given on dependents educational assistance, vocational rehabilitation, history of readjustment benefits - education and training and benefits under current programs. The document includes a chronology of educational assistance rates.

Abstract: The report establishes a uniform base population from which the number of veterans who are eligible for various veterans benefit programs may be estimated. It is used for program planning, administration, and evaluation. Staff offices receive a variety of information about separations from the Armed Forces, civilian migration data from the Bureau of the Census, and mortality rates from the Division of Vital Statistics, Department of Health and Human Services. The report provides statistical information on the estimated number of veterans in civilian life, by state; the estimated age of veterans in civilian life, by 5-year age groups; and the estimated number of veterans in civilian life, by regional office. The information is broken down according to service in specific wars.

The purpose of the summary is to enable each Veterans Administration (VA) health care facility to compare its workload data with data from facilities of similar size, type, or geographic region. Program officials are made aware of the actual data and may relate them to budget and planning. All VA health care facilities are included. Congress, veteran service organizations, and other interested parties receive this publication. Input comes from each VA hospital and outpatient clinic of the Department of Medicine and Surgery in inpatient and ambulatory care. Information on care provided to VA beneficiaries by non-VA facilities is derived from invoices and related documents. Care encompasses hospitals, domiciliaries, nursing homes, and clinics. Monthly data are provided on operating beds, average daily census, admissions, discharges, average monthly turnover rates, patients treated, applications received and processed, bed occupancy rates, waiting lists, patients remaining, and ambulatory visits. Appearing on a quarterly basis are data concerning full-time equivalent employment and cost distributions.

Abstract: The purpose of the report is to provide information concerning veterans from the most recent period of armed conflict--the Vietnam Era. The Congress, federal and state officials, service organizations, and Veterans Administration (VA) program offices use the material. The primary source of information is VA's internal reporting system for medical care (DM&S), compensation and pension, housing assistance, and education (DVB), and veteran population. Data (Reports and Statistics) on employment are provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The Department of Defense is the source for separations and other matters related to service. This report is prepared annually and covers various aspects of the Vietnam Era veteran populations, such as age, educational attainment, separations, and length of service. The section on employment deals with unemployment rates, and income. Medical topics covered include inpatient and outpatient workload measures. Disability and death beneficiaries appear under the section on compensation and pensions. Educational assistance, rehabilitation training, and housing loans are also discussed.

Public Opinion and Taxes. (S Series).
 40 pp.

Authority: Advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations Act of 1959 (P.L. 86-380).
Availability: Agency; GPO
Geographic Relevance: National; (SMSA) Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area; City; Regional
Abstract: The document provides a reading of public attitudes on the level and character of federal, state, and local tax and expenditure patterns; and indicates what the public considers fair and unfair in terms of taxes and in terms of the distribution of public policy power in the United States. It is a national sample with regional and demographic sub-categories. Users are government officials, academicians, and the general public. The report is based on a survey conducted by the Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, New Jersey, of 2,000 respondents. Questions were devised by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. Approximately five specific questions on tax or other fiscal policy matters are asked and the results are interpreted and analyzed. The information is presented annually, with historic reference to 1972.

Abstract: The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR) monitors the operation of the American Federal System and recommends improvements. As a continuing body, ACIR approaches its work by addressing itself to specific issues and problems, the resolution of which would produce cooperation among the levels of government, and more effective functioning of the federal system. ACIR is composed of representatives of all levels of government. The research and recommendations developed by the Agency are drawn from all other federal agencies, state and local governments, academic institutions, public interest groups, professional organizations, and research groups. ACIR has extensively studied the critical stresses currently being placed on traditional governmental taxing practices, the assignment of functions to the various levels of government, and such diverse subjects as transportation, interstate regionalism, local revenue diversification, cigarette bootlegging, criminal justice, and other functional and structural issues.

Abstract: The Federal Election Commission (FEC) is required by 2 U.S.C. Code 438(a)(10) "to serve as a National Clearinghouse for information in respect to the administration of elections." The National Clearinghouse on Election Administration fulfills this function. The Clearinghouse contracts with research organizations for the purpose of conducting independent studies of the administration of elections and utilizes the results to provide data to the public. Studies on election administration at the federal, state, and local levels are available on automated election systems, federal and state election law, campaign finance, absentee voting, available voting equipment, and the cost of administering elections. They are available from the Clearinghouse. There are no major reports.

Abstract: This manual is designed to help local election officials reduce voter waiting time at the polls by eliminating the bottlenecks in the voting process, which result from too few voting machines or voting booths. The manual consists of three sections: 1) how to determine the number of voting machines required at each polling place; 2) how to allocate available voting machines to all polling places; and 3) reference tables. The manual comprises a simple, self-instructional workbook which solves the problem of assigning voting machines to polling places without discussing the theories behind the practice. Each step of the process is discussed and examples are provided. Data forms needed to collect the required information are included. Reference tables used in applying the procedures for determining the number of voting machines needed at each precinct and for collecting information are presented and discussed.

Abstract: The Election Law Survey is designed to furnish in the form of a brief analysis the essential provisions of state election laws and important court decisions in the election law field. Information presented in this report is derived from copies of state election laws supplied by the State Legislative Reporting Service of Commerce Clearing House and from court decisions. This survey comprises major election legislation, both federal and state, and analyses of various Supreme Court, federal, and state cases involving election matters. The State Session law section contains summaries of election laws recently enacted by the states. The federal legislation section presents an analysis of any federal legislation introduced in Congress and any action on such legislation taken by the Congress. The section on judicial decisions presents a brief statement of the holding of each case considered and an analysis of the rationale and the issues involved in the decisions. A fourth section includes certain memoranda, reports, and studies in the election field and analyses of certain state Attorney General opinions concerning election law matters. The survey is published quarterly, with an annual cumulative edition for the year.

Abstract: This report supplements the basic study, Describe, Analyze and Compare the Currently Available Methods of Vote Counting Equipment and to Make Appropriate Recommendations. The information for this supplementary report was gathered through observations at nine voting locations in the November 5, 1974, elections. Five equipment/voting systems were observed. Four of the site visits were made to observe equipment that interfaces with the voter. The other new voting equipment item observed was a precinct tabulating unit. This report provides descriptions of the following five voting systems: 1) the Gyrex Corporation's Major Tally Box One (MTB-1), which is an optical scan voting system that provides immediate precinct totals when the polls are closed; 2) the Muller and Chambers' Vote Recorder, which is a punch card system; 3) the Video Voter, manufactured by the Frank Thorber Company, which is an electronic voting system containing the voting device and a data center; 4) the R. F. Shoup, which is a new lever voting system; and 5) the Precinct Ballot Computer, manufactured by Computer Elections Systems, which is used specifically to count punch card ballots at the precinct level. In addition to summary descriptions, the following detailed information is presented for each of the five systems: overview; equipment characteristics; equipment storage; equipment maintenance; machine set-up and testing; equipment security; ballot; staffing; training; voter education; voter process; vote tallying; computer support; and vendor supplies/services and equipment cost.

Abstract: This report is designed to assist local election officials in the procurement of new voting equipment and to provide a reference and a guide to the existing equipment. This compilation consists of the following three volumes: 1) Recommended Procurement Procedures and a Review of Current Equipment; 2) A Summary of State Voting Equipment Laws; and 3) A Guide for Legislative Drafting. The information for the reports was collected through examination and observation of voting systems and copies of state legislation and regulations, and by consultation with local election officials. Volume 1 contains recommended procedures for assessing voting equipment needs and for selecting equipment; a detailed review of currently available voting devices with regard to specifications, vendors, and vendor services; and a detailed step-by-step recommended procedure for purchasing voting equipment. Volume 2 provides summary memoranda of state election codes with respect to all relevant facets of voting equipment, with citations to the original documents. Volume 3 contains general guidelines for drafting legislation relating to voting equipment.

Abstract: This report examines the effects of the Federal Election Campaign Act, as amended, on the candidates who ran for the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives in the 1976 elections and their campaign representatives. The data used in this report were collected through a survey of 850 respondents, including candidates, campaign managers, and other campaign representatives. These respondents represented an accurate sample of the 2,150 candidates who filed reports with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) and appeared as candidates on the ballot in either primary or general elections for the House or Senate in 1976. This report contains a profile of the campaigns; descriptions of the 1976 campaign, including such factors as assessment of the elements of the campaign and comparison with past campaigns; examination of campaign finances, including possible effects of disclosure requirements and independent expenditures; description of the political players, including discussion of the campaign organization and the role of parties and political action groups; examination of the role of the FEC with regard to compliance attitudes and information transfer, including consideration of illegal campaign activity and the interaction between the campaign and the FEC; and consideration of the attitudes of the campaign representatives and the candidates concerning the effects of the act on the political campaign process.

Abstract: This facility houses a historical data base for administration and management of safety recommendations in any of the modes of transportation. Recommendations are proposed from the public, hearing parties, NTSB investigators, NTSB liaison staff, and NTSB recommendation followup. These proposals are reviewed for merit and a percentage are processed and adopted as safety recommendations which are the means used by the Board to prevent accidents and to promote transportation safety. Recommendation proposals are originated primarily by the modal divisions of the Bureau in relation to statutory requirements. The system contains safety recommendations. Safety recommendations (average 350 per year) and Safety proposals (average 650 per year) are issued as hardcopy. There is a manual system for query.

Board on Geographic Names

U.S. Board on Geographic Names (BGN).

OMB Funding Code/Title: 97-0100-0-1-051 / Operation and maintenance, Defense agencies

Subcommittee: House Committee on Armed Services; Senate Appropriations Committee; Defense Subcommittee, Senate Committee on Armed Services

Authority: Act of July 25, 1947 (P.L. 80-242).

Availability: Agency

Geographic Relevance: International/Foreign; National; Ancient

Abstract: The system operates as a consequence of requirements laid by Public Law 80-242 that the U.S. Board on Geographic Names (BGN), jointly with the Secretary of the Interior, determine spelling of geographic names for use in maps, charts, gazetteers, other documents produced for official U.S. purposes. The scope of BGN activities is worldwide and includes Antarctica, undersea and extraterrestrial features. While official U.S. agencies are the primary users, wide use is also made by libraries, schools, research institutions, commercial publishers, and foreign official names standardization agencies. Staff support for this system is provided by the Defense Mapping Agency and by the U.S. Geological Survey. Except for being responsive to P.L. 80-242, the BGN has no external input. Internal inputs are generated by action of the Board and its constituent members who represent nine federal departments and agencies. In addition, materials from foreign countries are exploited for BGN foreign names programs, while materials from state and local authorities are exploited for BGN domestic-names programs. The principal form in which names information is made available is gazetteers and "Decision Lists." The former cover the world, Antarctica, and undersea areas; and latter are confined to the United States and its possessions and territorial. Gazetteers are issued irregularly and together present more than 10 million names. The Decision Lists contain names on which the Board has issued a specific decision; they are published quarterly. Many of foreign-names gazetteers are out of date. See 109000002 for more detail on domestic U.S. names.

Abstract: This system, supported by the U.S. Geological Survey, provides staff support for the domestic-names programs of the Board on Geographic Names (BGN) in response to provisions of Public Law 80-242 (which created BGN in its present form) and provides information about official domestic geographic names to federal and non-federal users. The BGN, working jointly with the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to determine official geographic name usage throughout the federal government. Primary sources of information are current local geographic-name usage, (verbal and written), legal or official local name usage (written), federal map and publication usage, and other kinds of documentation based on established names use for scientific, administrative, and information purposes. As researched and processed by Geological Survey staff and Board on Geographic Names actions and guidelines, these sources become the basic domestic-name information data base for standard name use throughout the federal government.

Abstract: The report meets the federal mandate, Section 311 of the Adult Education Act, P.L. 91-230, as amended. The report provides federal, state, and local adult education data together with recommendations relating to the Federal Adult Education Act and other federal programs having relationship to adult education. The intended audience is the Executive and Legislative branches of the federal government, together with selected federal, state, regional, and local education agencies and organizations. The primary source for gathering the information is the National Advisory Council on Adult Education. Adult education information is pieced from self-initiated studies or materials from various government and private organizations compiling statistical information on adult education. The report presents 1977 adult education data gathered by the National Advisory Council on Adult Education, including: results of legislative hearings on reauthorization of the Adult Education Act, a survey of state support of adult education and recommendations, state demographic data, agency organization charts, state allotment tables, and the Adult Education Act. Information is updated annually.

Abstract: The Council advises the Congress and the Secretary of Education with regard to programs benefiting Indian children and adults. Recommendations of the Council reflect the needs and desires of local Indian communities in education. Their recommendations have been incorporated into Department of Education/Office of Indian Education regulations, programs priorities, budget requests and the general administration of the Indian Education Act. Additionally, the NACIE works in close coordination with National Indian organizations, state and local educational agencies, institutions of higher education and Indian-controlled education agencies (Non-IEAs). The National Advisory Council on Indian Education advises the Congress and the Secretary of Education with regard to programs benefiting Indians. It is required to submit a list of nominees for the position of Assistant Secretary for Indian Education, advise the Secretary with respect to the administration of programs in which Indians participate and from which they can benefit, review applications for assistance and make recommendations with respect to their approval, evaluate programs and projects carried out under programs in which Indians participate and from which they can benefit, provide technical assistance for improving the education of Indian children, assist the Secretary in developing criteria and regulations for the administration and evaluation of grants, submit annual reports to the Congress on its activities and recommendations, and be consulted regarding the definition of the term "Indian." The annual reports chronicle activities for each fiscal year.

Abstract: This catalog provides unified reference operation support and easy access to the economic data files that are available within the Office of Operations Support in support of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The economic data files listed and briefly described in this catalog have been acquired to meet the needs and requirements for information in response to real or anticipated situations which may be characterized as emergencies, crises, or disasters. This catalog has been developed so that maximum benefit may be gained from these data. It is intended that the catalog will provide managers and analysts with a ready reference source when structuring problems and tasks requiring economic data. Many of the data files described in the catalog have been arranged and classified in response to unique problems; however, it is conceivable that these data will have value in efforts to solve future problems which may have similar properties to those of the recent past. Original data sources include the Departments of Commerce, Treasury, Defense, and Labor. Data bases maintained by OS and listed in this catalog deal with capital stocks, 1972 FEMA input-output and demand input transformation tables (DITT), Mathematics and Computation Laboratory (MCL) microeconomic model data, Bureau of Economic Analysis input/output tables (1972), real gross output by input/output sectors, 1947-1978, National stockpile master inventory file and other data and emergency industrial capacity data for 100 manufacturing and mining industries.

Abstract: The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) resource data base includes detailed records on virtually all resources important to the defense of, or in the event of, enemy attack: the survival and recovery of the United States. It is the result of a cooperative effort of the FEMA and the federal agencies which have been delegated emergency preparedness responsibilities. The FEMA resource data base was established in an effort to provide the most accurate information possible to support the emergency information needs of the federal agencies and to assist the Director of the FEMA in his roles of Presidential adviser and coordinator of nonmilitary defense. Federal agencies and departments having significant emergency responsibilities contribute to the resource data base, which has been developed either by drawing directly from existing agency statistical programs or by promoting modifications and extensions to existing data collection programs. This catalog is concerned with that portion of the data bank which supports damage assessment and vulnerability analysis information needs. A brief description of the coverage and contents of each component of the resource data base is provided. The catalog is published as FEMA Technical Manual No. 258. Data bases described herein may be classified.

Authority: Federal Fire Prevention and Control Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-498).

Abstract: The NFDC has three major objectives: 1) to accurately define the magnitude and characteristics of the fire problem in the United States; 2) to help state and local governments do the same using local data; and 3) to help disseminate information on the fire problem and the solutions to it. Data on fire incidents in the form of cumulative computer tapes are gathered from participating states and selected cities. Other data useful in statistical analysis of the fire problem are acquired from HEW's Center for Health Statistics, the National Fire Protection Association, the insurance industry, and the International Association of Fire Fighters. Fire-related literature in the form of state fire marshal reports, other state and local government documents, books, periodicals, federal documents, and foreign materials are collected and organized for retrieval and use. In addition, special studies, provide input to the overall Data Center Operation. The Data Center is structured into four operating divisions. The Fire Data System Division is responsible for establishing and maintaining the national data base of fire incidents and fire-related casualties. Reports of fire incidents are collected via the National Fire Incident Reporting System (NFIRS), separately described. The Fire Reference Service Division gathers the fire-related literature for use by the Agency staff for background and decision-making and provides reference and referral service to the fire community and the public. The Analysis and Evaluation Division analyzes NFIRS and other data to produce national fire estimates, to help characterize U.S. fire problems and establish priorities among them, and to suggest remedial actions. The program also evaluates selected fire protection programs, develops evaluation and analysis methodologies, and provides technical consultation. The Computer Systems Operations Division supports NFDC and other Agency requirements. The entire Data Center provides feedback and help to the participating states and municipalities.

Abstract: "Fire Technology Abstracts" is a bimonthly abstracts journal prepared by the Informatics General Corporation with the participation of the U.S. Fire Administration. Its aim is to provide comprehensive reference to the applied fire literature. The information has been gleaned from a wide variety of sources (journals, books, reports, patents, codes, and Standards), with emphasis on the report and patent literature, for which referencing heretofore has been inadequate. Although the English-language literature comprises the majority of the entries, the coverage includes selections from the world fire literature. The journal is arranged in two sections: abstracts and indexes. The abstracts section contains the complete bibliographic description required for retrieval of each item, along with a description of the contents of the item, usually consisting of the author's abstract, summary, or conclusions. The patents entries contain, in addition, citations of the patent classes, in most cases in accordance with the international classification system, as well as filing and disclosure dates, priorities, and, if available, assignees and diagrams. The index section consists of four indexes: author, subject, source, and report number. Each entry in each index is keyed to an abstract number. Annual cumulative indexes are published. The subject index entries consist of up to three hierarchic descriptive levels to clearly identify the subject content. The source index displays source document names and organization names under the headings: books, codes, conferences, congresses, dissertations, journals, meetings, patents, reports, seminars, standards, and symposia.

Abstract: The function of the Division is to collect and maintain publications, recurring and monographic, prepared by the Agency for International Development (AID) and under AID support and to service and make these materials available within AID and on demand to persons outside of the Agency and in the less developed countries. Also, it acquires permanent externally prepared technical publications, periodicals, and documents in development assistance fields required by AID personnel. The Division also provides guidance in design and use of information components in projects/contracts/grants; ongoing monitoring of information activities, "packaged" technical information outputs; dissemination of these technical information outputs, directly and through international information networks; and technical assistance to LDCs, as required, to upgrade competencies in the information sciences. The collection includes all major documents, publications, and reports produced by AID Offices and Missions as well as all major documents, publications, and reports produced under AID support by contractors and/or grantees and materials pertinent to development assistance project design and implementation produced commercially and/or by other foreign assistance donors. The information content varies. AID documentation materials comprise program analyses and presentations; sector analyses and strategy papers; project design documents; implementation orders; and project and special evaluations. Technical materials range from state-of-the-art surveys to detailed scientific/technical reports, all focused on resolving specific impediments to Third World development. AID programs and projects span the following congressionally mandated substantive fields: food production and nutrition; health, population and family planning; education and human resources development; rural and urban planning and development; and selected applications of science and technology in other developmental sectors. The information resource attempts to represent AID-generated materials comprehensively and to maintain, in the AID Development Information Center, current working collections of materials produced commercially and/or by other foreign assistance donors.

Abstract: This system is designed to provide for a central statistical unit of the Agency; to provide definitive worldwide program data for planning, policymaking, operational, and research purposes in foreign assistance, and related matters for use within the Agency, other U.S. government agencies, the Congress, international agencies, American business, the media, and the public; and to provide program data in support of the Agency's congressional presentation. Sources of information include publications and reports of U.S. and foreign governments, international organizations, such as UN and specialized agencies. Data are based on uniform concepts and definitions to permit intercountry and interregional comparisons. Also available are statistical data on all U.S. economic and military assistance programs to developing and developed countries and on assistance from international organizations to these countries. In addition, some analyses of financial and program operational activities of AID are provided. Principal reports include: U.S. Overseas Loans and Grants (annual, hardcopy); ad hoc reports as required by the Agency or the Congress; and charts (copies of charts used in Congressional Presentation).

Abstract: The Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) Investment Financing Handbook provides information on financial services available to prospective international investors. The major objective of the finance program is to assist U.S. lenders and business enterprises in searching out and financing worthwhile projects in developing countries. Information for this handbook was drawn from enabling legislation and internal operating procedures. The major programs provided by OPIC to assist prospective investors are the investment guaranty program, the direct investment fund, and the pre-investment assistance program. This handbook describes each of these finance programs, project eligibility and investment criteria, financing techniques, loan terms, relationships with other financing institutions, feasibility study programs, and how to apply for assistance through these programs.

Abstract: The Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) Investment Insurance Handbook provides information on insurance services available to prospective international investors. OPIC investment insurance programs provide coverage to eligible investors in qualified projects in less developed friendly countries or areas against loss due to specific political risks. The information included in this handbook was drawn from enabling legislation and internal operating procedures. This handbook provides a general introduction to the OPIC investment insurance program and provides specific information with regard to eligible investors; areas where covered investments may be made; the nature of coverage, including co-insurance, coverage for inability to convert currency, coverage for expropriation, and coverage for war or insurrection; levels and costs of coverage; contractors' coverage; special programs for mineral and energy projects; other eligibility criteria; preferences in terms of size of firms; and application procedures.

Abstract: This leaflet provides information on the availability of Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) investment insurance and finance programs in about 90 friendly less-developed countries in Latin America, Asia, Africa, and Europe. These OPIC programs provide qualified U.S. investors with political risk insurance and financial assistance to support their investments in these countries; this list provides a quick reference to such programs for prospective investors. The information presented in this leaflet was drawn from enabling legislation. This brochure lists each of the countries with which an agreement for the operation of OPIC programs is in force or under negotiation and provides information on the status and range of program availability at the time of publication. Information on the availability of the following types of investment insurance coverage is included: inconvertibility of local currency earnings and return of capital; expropriation; and war, revolution, and insurrection. Information is also provided on the availability of the following types of finance programs: loan guarantees, direct loans, and pre-investment assistance. Brief descriptions of the programs are also included. (SC) The library takes part in interlibrary loan.

Abstract: This brochure provides a brief outline of the insurance protection offered by the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC) to U.S. construction and service contractors contemplating work in developing countries. The OPIC policy includes compensation for construction equipment plant and materials damaged by war, revolution, or insurrection; protection against expropriation; and, in some cases, provision of coverage for nonpayment of arbitrary awards and refusal to arbitrate disputed claims. The information presented in this brochure was drawn from enabling legislation and internal operating procedures. The brochure provides an introduction to, and brief description of, the special incentives program for U.S. construction and services investments in developing countries. Specific aspects of the program which are discussed include foreign governmental approval, term of policy, premiums, indemnification, how to apply for a policy, binder procedures, review by OPIC of the contract provisions, and issuance of policies.

Abstract: The chief purpose of the OPIC Library is to support the work of OPIC by providing library services to the staff. The library acquires, organizes, and maintains printed materials and microforms in the subject areas of interest to OPIC. It provides information and reference services and circulates current issues of periodicals to the staff. It handles all interlibrary loan requests from the staff and prepares and circulates a newsletter and subject bibliographies. The library acts as the centralized order section to handle book purchases and periodical subscriptions. The library collection consists of books, pamphlets, government and World Bank documents and reports, annual reports of corporations, newspapers, and legislative histories of public laws pertaining to OPIC. Some of the subjects covered are banks and banking, international finance, international law, foreign investment, statistics, commerce, trade, and economics, with particular emphasis on the developing countries of the world. The library takes part in interlibrary loan.

Abstract: The system provides for the development of a pertinent and up-to-date collection of U.S. and international materials as a base from which to extend the library services to the staff in the Washington, DC, headquarters in support of programming, training, and administrative functions. It also provides technical assistance to Peace Corps volunteers and staff and for the collection and cataloging of Peace Corps-produced or related publications and reports. Approximately 1,500 new books and agency publications are added each year. Over 350 periodical subscriptions are received. The library collection is arranged by the Library of Congress classification system, using Library of Congress subject headings with modifications for Peace Corps materials. Included are books, reports, and periodicals in the following subject areas: U.S. domestic and urban affairs, the Third World, Peace Corps programs, voluntarism, poverty, economic development, agriculture, health, cross-cultural studies, and foreign language learning materials. The major output is the monthly "Selected List of Recent Additions to Library," which is a hardcopy for internal distribution only.

Abstract: The Library of Congress Classification Schedules provide for arrangements of books and other materials by subject, using mixed alphanumeric notation. Used by over 1400 libraries in the United States and abroad in addition to the Library of Congress, the classification schedules provide the basis for constructing call numbers for books and other materials in library collections. The Subject Cataloging Division of the Library of Congress is the primary source of data for this publication. The Music Section of the Descriptive Cataloging Division and Geography and Map Division also contribute to classification in their subject areas. The schedules contain class numbers and captions for all subjects represented by books and other materials in the Library of Congress classified collections. Newly created class numbers are shown in the quarterly Additions and Changes; new editions of individual schedules are published irregularly.

Abstract: The publication provides a list of subject headings, primarily topical, which have been applied to materials cataloged at the Library of Congress. These subject headings appear on catalog cards and computer tapes distributed by the Library of Congress and are frequently used by libraries across the country to describe the subject content of items they catalog. The Subject Cataloging Division of the Library of Congress is the primary source of data for this publication. The Music Section of the Descriptive Cataloging Division and the Geography and Map Division provide subject headings in their respective areas. The publication contains subject headings, cross references to related terms, references from terms not used, and often suggested class numbers for subjects in all areas. The 9th edition is supplemented by quarterly publications which are cumulated annually (1979, 1980). New editions are produced irregularly and incorporate changes made previously and new material. The subject headings are arranged in alphabetical order.

Abstract: This up-to-date, on-line, computerized information file contains analytical, descriptive, and status information about all public general bills and resolutions of the 96th, 97th and 98th Congresses. The file supports the legislative functions of the Senate and of the House of Representatives. All public bills and resolutions introduced to the Congress are abstracted, digested, and tracked throughout the legislative process. Each record in the file contains detailed information about bill sponsorship, co-sponsorship, content, and legislative status. The file is updated daily, with each record kept up-to-date as changes in its status occur. Cumulative printed volumes are produced 3 times per year, with supplements published approximately every 6 weeks. All records are available in an on-line computer file accessible through the Library of Congress/SCORPIO information retrieval system.

Abstract: The National Referral Center is a free referral service which directs those who have questions concerning any subject to organizations that are qualified and willing to provide the answers. The Center is not equipped to furnish answers to specific questions nor to provide bibliographic assistance. The referral service uses a subject-indexed, computerized file of more than 12,000 organizations. The description of each organization includes its special fields of interest and the types of information services it is willing to provide. The file is used primarily by the Center's referral specialists to augment their personal files. The data base is also accessible through the Library's SCORPIO system and through the RECON computer network operated by the Department of Energy. Text selected from the data base is occasionally photocomposed and published in the series "A Directory of Information Resources in the United States."

Abstract: Chemical Abstracts Service (CAS) makes information available and usable by extracting and providing varied routes of access to items of interest in the published literature of chemistry and chemical engineering. CAS uses an advanced, computer-based system for processing, storing, searching, and disseminating scientific and technical information. CAS' principal publication, "Chemical Abstracts," is its major effort and a prime source for abstracted and indexed chemical information throughout the world. Most of the other CAS publications and services are derived from the computerized processing system that produces Chemical Abstracts. The CAS data base covers the period from 1907 to the present, with about 4 million chemical substances identified in the CAS Chemical Registry System and indexed in "Chemical Abstracts." All abstracts published in "Chemical Abstracts" since 1907 have been filmed on 16 mm microfilm, packaged in cassettes, and made available as the Chemical Abstracts on Microfilm Services. The film is updated 10 to 12 times each year. Computer-based products and services are also available.
